John Wanamaker's Store, Philadelphia.

These are the First Days of the Fall Business,

already the hum of activity begins. We launch the busy season with that prove to be strangely low. A few of these have been in store some days, but, to give everybody a fair chance, we held the announcements until the return of people from their holidays.

A good lot of first-rate Jerseys at $2.25. These are all black. The colors are $2.50.

A Black Dress Silk at 75 cents, that until recently was always $1.00.

A fine Black Rhadama, 22 inches wide, at $1.50.

Half-wool Black Dress Goods at 12½ cents, which is just half-price.

All-wool stylish Plaid Suiting, 42 inches, at 50 cents. We sold the same at $1.00.

Another in stripes at 65 cents. Not dear at $1.00.

A quality of Lupin's Cashmere for 50 cents (all wool). The new tariff will prevent this quality from ever again selling at this price.

A Black Albatross at 25 cents, exactly half-price.

A fine Black Camel's Hair, 46 inches wide, at 60 cents.

A good 36-inch all-wool Cashmere at 40 cents.

An excellent Black Cashmere, all-wool, a yard wide, at 45c.

A very few much admired Embroidered Robes at one-third off of usual price.

A Bleached Muslin, full yard wide, for 10c. The best we ever had at that price.

The best Twilled, All-Wool Red Flannel we ever sold for 25c.

The best Canton Flannel for 12½c. We never could get so good a quality at the price before.

An extraordinary lot of Towels at 25c.

Eight lots of Ladies' and Children's Hose that are on our counters at 25 per cent. under prices.

These lots of Shoes that are amazingly desirable for the prices:

250 pairs Women's Straight Goat Button, $4.35.
172 pairs Women's Straight Goat Button, $3.25.
245 pairs Women's Curacoa Kid Button, $4.25.
186 pairs Women's French Kid Button, $5.00.
152 pairs Women's Kid Slippers, $1.25.
112 pairs Women's Kid Ties, $2.00.
110 pairs Women's French Kid Oxford Ties, $3.25.
141 pairs Women's Front Lace Walking Boots, $3.25.
131 pairs Women's Front Lace Walking Boots, $4.50.
150 pairs Women's French Kid Button Boots, $5.25.

China and Glassware we hardly dare to risk saying anything about, as the lots announced are nearly always sold out in a few hours of the day they are presented. Watch the city daily papers for the announcements, and if these lots are sold when you come do not be disappointed, as we have new lots in every day or two.

In Furniture. Young couples should see

The new Ash Suite of Bed Room Furniture for $25.
The same goods in Cherry for $28.

Our Works at present turn us out only four suites per day of these goods, so that first come, first served. Nothing like this has ever been done in Philadelphia before.

A fine frame Body Brussels Carpet at $1.25 that we are willing to endorse as a good thing.

We are not permitted to give the makers' names. The goods are new this season, and fifty patterns at least to choose from.

The first Fall Offering of Ladies' Robes are all-wool, of ample material, in nine varieties, dark, rich hues, and the new patterns are on the palm-leaf order. The effect is much the same, if not a full equivalent, as though an expensive Cashmere Shawl were dissected and made into a robe, as is often done. The expense being infinitely less—$25.

Also a few Wrapper Patterns, Persian, and with a decided Oriental effect. The olive, old gold and rich, dark hues are subdued in a broad border of consistent but curious formation, 10 to 11 yards each. $2.00 per yard.

There are other lots equally interesting, and new things daily arriving.

Samples of Dress Goods sent by mail; a "Postal" will receive immediate attention.

JAMES BUCHANAN.

The following by J. M. Buckley, D. D., editor of the Christian Advocate in a literary notice of September 20, 1883, I think should be widely circulated. The italics are mine, but it seems to me the whole article ought to be in italics, and read by every citizen. Twenty-three years ago was a trying era in our country. Time has vindicated many who were then under the ban of Republican censure.

"Truth crushed to the earth shall rise again."

E. M. TEWKSBURY.

Catawissa, Pa.

"Twenty years ago few believed that a Life of James Buchanan could ever find a market north of Mason and Dixons' line. Despised by loyalists of both parties as a weakling, if not detested as a traitor, he retired from the Presidency, to die in 1868 with little more than formal honor to his memory. The giant passions of the civil war had not then begun to die out, men had not then to look calmly and judicially on a career which seemed to have crowned itself only with weakness and indecision. The popular mood of that time made small account of character or public services which preceded the struggle for the national life. What men believed and did during the war were the criteria by which they were judged. James Buchanan was believed to be unsound in his Constitutional views and over-sympathetic with traitors. That was enough. That he he had been a statesman and diplomatist of unstained honor was nothing. It is perhaps too much to say that the masterly life of James Buchanan by George Ticknor Curtis wholly relieves him of the charges which have been so universally believed. But it is not too much to say that the most strenuous of those who have discredited the loyalty and patriotism of Mr. Buchanan will, if responsive to truth, be obliged to revise their judgments and acquit him of intentional unfaithfulness to the Union. Such will see that if the President did not take more active steps to preserve the Union it was because the Republican Congress distrusted the President and refused to put the means of action within his reach. There does not upon the evidence now before us, seem to have been a sufficient justification for the conduct of Congress. From a certain point of view this distrust was natural. All the "statesmanship" which preceded the war was of the compromise kind. It had failed to secure quiet because it was a concession to wrong. But Mr. Buchanan was not to blame for believing, according to his education and famous precedents, that conciliation to the utmost should precede war. He still seems weak and timid, a man of late expedients and tentative compromises. But he can no longer be justly esteemed a traitor, nor can his devotion to the Union be fairly questioned. When candid men remember their own rapid growth of opinion from the time of Lincoln's election to the shot on Sumter, they will see that President Buchanan was in a place of extreme difficulty, at an age when complications are seldom boldly cut, and when new views are entertained with difficulty. They will see that he acted with patience, wisdom, and a union loving spirit, and that to his care it is due that the war did not earlier brake out under conditions of feeling at the North less likely to have permitted that wonderful unification of purpose which was secured at a later time.

In two large volumes, with portraits of Buchanan in early manhood and in later life, Mr. Curtis tells the story of the statesman's career. Of Scotch-Irish descent, of God-fearing parents, Buchanan felt during his early life and through his whole existence the influences of the integrity and piety characteristic of his ancestry. To his mother, a woman of great industry and ability, he owed his liberal education. His college life was a singular mixture of hard study and a wildness of conduct which nearly brought him to expulsion. After graduation he studied law and gave early promise of the eminence gained later on. He was elected to the State Legislature in 1814 and made reputation at once for sagacity and legal ability. Just previous to his election to Congress he becomes engaged to a lady worthy of his love, who, for some reason not fully explained, cancels the engagement and dies shortly afterward. Never again does Mr. Buchanan appear to have contemplated matrimony though it is known that the cause of alienation was one that was trivial and would have been temporary but for the death of the lady. As a relief from sorrow the young lawyer enters upon political life, and accepts a nomination for Congress without hope of election, but is elected.

Henceforth his life, until the close of his Presidential term, is the history of the United States. At twenty-nine, on entering Congress, he already possessed legislative experience and debating power. His political principles were still unsettled, and a political stagnation of Monroe's administration needed the storm which followed to isolate and clear opinion. Opposition to John Quincy Adams was the force which broke up the truce of parties, and gave the warring factions the names of National Republicans and Democrats. Mr. Buchanan, in leading, with others, the opposition to Adams and Clay, found himself a "Democrat."

The account of Mr. Buchanan's Congressional career is enlivened, not only by the interest of the facts, but by excellent sketches of his contemporaries, written at the time, or as recollections in later life. The correspondence, which illuminates the inner political life of the time, is amazing in quantity, and of the highest order of ability. These documents must hereafter form part of the materials of history, and essentially modify, even to the point of restatement, many accepted views. A very interesting chapter is that which shows how early the third-term question came up, and how vigorous the opposition to the third term was. In February, 1829, Smyth of Virginia offered a resolution looking toward the prohibition of a second Presidential term by Constitutional amendment. On a motion to postpone consideration until March 3, Mr. Buchanan said: "The example of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe has forever determined that no President shall be more than once re-elected. The principle is now become as sacred as if written in the Constitution." Yet he believed it best that the matter should be left to the people,, and his forecast was correct when he believed that the passage of time would make a third term impossible.

It has almost passed from recollection that Buchanan succeeded Randolph as Minister to Russia, and that he contended with Nesselrode, and had an interview with Nicholas as creditable to the minister as to the monarch. His account of this interview is delightful in its frankness. The Old World life, not only at St. Petersburg, but in other capitals, is charmingly described, in private letters as well as public documents.

But, interesting as is the record of his senatorial and diplomatic career, the reader will scarce scan it first, but turn to the years in which Mr. Buchanan was President. Yet there are many charming pages, relating to social life in England, which will divide the reader's attention with the great bays before the war. And it is proved beyond all contradiction that to President Buchanan, and not to Gen. Scott, was due the order which prevented the arming of several Southern forts by ordnance from Pittsburg. A new face is put on the conduct of Secretary Floyd by evidence which makes it doubtful whether the distribution and sale of arms, so much complained of, was intended by Floyd for the benefit of the Southern states. It is shown, apparently beyond contradiction, that Floyd was a strong Unionist until Buchanan forced him from his Cabinet for the misconduct about the Indian Bonds, and that Floyd to save himself, by a hastily constructed political bridge, got up a new issue, over which he departed with eclat to the Southern side. It is also shown that Gen. Scott's memory was far less to be depended upon than his patriotism. His memory was senile, his patriotism virile. He can be regarded after the revelations of this book, as a man of truth only by the charity due advanced years and failing powers.

Our conviction, after pondering the evidence here displayed, and against long-maintained prejudgmets, is that Mr. Curtis has succeeded in relieving the memory of President Buchanan of almost all of the charges against him. The interests of truth compel this statement. We say "almost all." There still remains that radical vice in a statesman for troublous times, over caution and indecision. But of sympathy with practical secession, of desire to get rid of cares which ought to be borne by passing them over to his successor, we can find no trace. What he could do according to his best conception of duty to prevent war and save the Union, he did up to the last moment of his official career. His judgment may still be criticised; his intentions cannot be. When it is remembered that Mr. Seward wholly mistook the duration and seriousness of the war, even after it had begun, we may well be charitable to one who endeavored to prevent what he foresaw and said would be one of the most terrific conflicts of the world.*

In private life Mr. Buchanan is a delightful figure. Courteous with the old courtesy, he knew how to be playful and yet retain dignity. His old age is patient and cheerful. He declares his faith in the Gospel of Christ, and dies with clouded fame, indeed, but in peace and hope.

It is unnecessary to say that Mr. Curtis has done his work well. He has done it supremely well. With a judicial mind he has sifted documents, compared dates, and authenticated facts, until one rejoices that a task so difficult has fallen into the hands of a master. Never personally known to Mr. Buchanan, he seems to have no object in view but the truth of history, and if this verdict on the ex-President's career goes contrary to the prejudices of thousands, it will compel acceptance widely, because of the evidence, clear and irresistible, by which he rehabilitates the subject in the respect of his countrymen. His work, in a literary sense, is of the highest order, and will be an authority henceforth for all who can yield prejudice to the truth, and rancor to charity.

Demands of Colored Voters.

THE SECOND PLACE ON THE REPUBLICAN TICKET OR THE PLEDGE OF A CABINET POSITION.

The utterance of fred Douglass in his recent speech in Louisville that will attract most attention and comment is that which insists that some high executive office, such as the Vice Presidency or a cabinet position, should be given to a negro as the mark of the political equality, and it might be added, their fealty to the Republican party. This remark was not made at haphazard. For some time there has been a movement among political colored men to get recognition on the Republican Presidential ticket in 1884. They want Bruce nominated for Vice President. Who would be the head of the ticket in that case would be immaterial, though preference is expressed in many of the colored newspapers for Secretary Lincoln. But, failing in this programme, they will try to extract a pledge from the Republican candidate for President that he will put a negro in the cabinet. Bruce would get the strongest backing from his race for this position. Douglass has been supposed to be very conservative on this point, and has lost caste thereby among the more radical negroes, who have charged him with bartering his independence for office. That he comes out thus boldly, therefore, for recognition for the race by political preferment, shows either a change of feeling on his part or a shrewd desire to place himself in line with popular tendencies. That the allegiance of the negro to the Republican party has been shaken of late, and is now worn loosely, is growing more evident daily.

She went to the circulating library and asked if they had the "Letters of Jane Welsh Carlyle," and received the reply, "You will get 'em at the Post-office."

In commenting on the future of the negro, John C. Calhoun says that "it may be safely left to time." Yes, and the wood pile, chicken coop and water-mellon patch.

The Child of the Forest Must Go.

With increased population and numerous railroads to the Pacific and all through the western territories, there comes a demand for opening the Indian reservations for settlement and development. Secretary Teller said to a Chicago reporter the other day that the time had come when the Indian question must be handled without gloves. It was absurd that large tracts of valuable lands should be given up to the savages, when the public needed them. He had been much struck with this fact traveling over the Northern Pacific, where, at one point in Montana for about 100 miles, the road ran through an apparently desert country which seemed to be very good land. Noticing no cattle nor any evidences of civilization, when he reached Billings he inquired into the matter and found that the tract was the Crow reservation—8,000,000 acres given up to about 2,500 Indians, who had no use for the land. In this statement of Secretary Teller's there is no reference to the fact that the Indians hold these lands under a sacred contract with the government, and their title is as good as the deed of the farm of any man in Pennsylvania or any other State. Still the white man wants the land and the child of the forest must go. But the government should see that no injustice is done to the Indian in the matter.—Erie Observer.

The Apple Aspect.

TWO "OFF YEARS" HAPPEN TO COME TOGETHER.

The apple situation is peculiar this year. It was the "off year" last season, and there was the customary light crop at prices ranging from $2.50 to $4 per barrel. This year "by good rights," as the farmers say, there should be a larger crop, such as they gather oftentimes, for sale at $1 to $2 per barrel, and export thousands of barrels at those prices. The Boston Commercial says: Reports from nearly all apple growing sections give promise of a very different state of affairs. It is too much, perhaps, to say that the apple crop is a failure, but it will fall short of expectations. This is the talk of our leading dealers in this fruit, and numerous private advices were quoted in support of this view. These all point to the fact that the crop is a scattered one rather than a failure. One New England farmer writes here that he will have a large crop of 500 barrels. His neighbors will not do as well as usual. Different counties in the same State return varying reports. On the same farm a marked difference is noticed in the bearing of trees. Generally, trees in sheltered localities have done the best, and this seems to be the key to the whole situation. The trees blossomed well throughout the country, but were seriously affected by cold and damp weather in June, and the crop is largely in proportion to the natural protection of orchards. Under such circumstances it is next to impossible to estimate the shortage. As the harvest advances there is likely to be considerable change in the situation. But it is safe to count on an unusually small crop for an apple year. It looks now as if higher prices than those of last year would be realized. A prominent dealer informs us that he will contract for choice Baldwins at $4 per barrel. Farmers are acting cautiously about contracts, and only placing them at safe figures. The export movement will be very small at the best, with a likelihood of a much great value of imports from Canada, where the crop is said to be large.

SAVING AND SOWING CLOVER SEED.—The Germantown Telegraph very seasonably says that in securing clover seed it is best to cut it as soon as the heads become brown, some time in September. If cut later the heavy dews and reduced heat of the sun will cause dampness and the hull to cling very tightly to the heads; When cut, it is recommended to be at once put under cover to secure dryness; some put in stacks or cover with straw. If the ground is dry and the sun is hot, it may be hauled in the same day it is cut. Some farmers cut it and stir it and put it in windrows the same as making hay; but this is a waste of seed, as the stirring rattles off the ripest and best of the seed. In moving it to the barn, it can be stored on the barn floor until ready to thresh. If there is no huller in the neighborhood, enough can be threshed out for one's sowing; and, as it will not be very clean, it should be sown in February or earlier, so that the hulls and seed may settle in the ground and germinate as soon as the soil is warm enough giving it a good start, which is almost certain to produce a good crop.

THE JEWISH LEAP YEAR.—This is a Jewish leap year, and is remarkable for containing thirteen months and 393 days. The lateness of the Jewish holidays this fall is attributed to the peculiar and exceptional character of the year, for ordinarily the New Year celebration occurs prior to the middle of september, while this year—5633 according to the ancient reckoning—the holiday did not occur until the first day of October, not less than fifteen days subsequent to the date of its usual happening, and what is still more remarkable, twenty-eight days later in the Jewish calendar than last year's occurrence of the same festival, for that year contained but 355 days.

APPLE BUTTER.—Nice apple butter is excellent with cold meat. Use tart apples, and to three pecks after they are peeled and quartered allow nine pounds of brown sugar and two gallons of water. Let the water come to a boil, then add the sugar; when it is dissolved put in the apples. Stir them constantly with a large wooden spoon. After they are soft let them simmer until they are thick, and do not seem at all watery. If you wish to add any spices you may do so. Cinnamon, nutmeg and a little ginger are liked by some people. When it is possible to get it, boiled cider makes a delicious addition; in this case less water should be used.

INGROWING TOE NAILS.—For ingrowing toe nails begin the effort at cure by simple application of the solution of the tender part of a small quantity of perchloride of iron. It is found in drug stores in fluid form, though some times in powder. There is immediately a sensation of pain, constriction or burning. In a few minutes the afflicted portion is felt to be dried up, tanned or mummified, and cases to be painful. The patient who before could not put his foot to the floor, now finds that he can walk upon it without pain. By permitting the hardened wood-like flesh to remain two or three weeks, it can be easily removed by soaking the foot in warm water. A new and healthy structure is found below. If, thereafter, the nails be no more cut around the corners or sides, but always carved across the front end, they will in future grow only forward; and by wearing a shoe of reasonable good size and shape, all further trouble will be avoided.

Flavor to suit taste. A small portion of the beaten whites of the eggs can be saved to decorate the top. Stir into the latter a little sugar, put it into a paper funnel, press it out over the top of the pudding according to fancy, and place it in the oven a few moments to color.

This course was suggested months ago by the Columbian, and we believe a survey was made in the spring, and then the matter dropped. The county has about $60,000 invested in the new jail, and this is too large a sum to be thrown away by abandoning the building, if there is any way of avoiding it. The expenditure of $1000 or even $5000 should be made, if so much is necessary to put it in a habitable condition. If it cannot be drained at all the sooner this is determined the better. If it can be drained it should be done at once.

The gentleman failed to learn anything further concerning them.

Admitted at last! A stalwart newspaper defender of the republican obstructionists in the state senate says; "It is not the fault of the democrats that the apportionment bills have failed. No republican will lay that political crime at their door." That is to say, the failure to pass apportionments is a political crime and one for which the democrats are not responsible. Then who is responsible? Manifestly the republican senate. Truth, like murder will out.

PETITION FOR ALASKA.

At a meeting of the Woman's Presbyterial Home Missionary Society, Presbytery of Northumberland, held in Danville, Pa., last Spring, it was resolved to petition the representatives from the Congressional districts included within the limits of the Presbytery, to take some action in behalf of long neglected Alaska. Several bills have been introduced into Congress, providing for a civil government in this distant region, but thus far all that Congress has seemed to be able to do, was to listen to a second reading of the bills and order them printed. In the meantime widow-burning, torture of witches, slavery of children, infanticide, and other horrible practices of barbarous lands, have been going on in this United States possession, which has had no government, and no administration of justice except that which the pioneer missionaries have been able to exercise. The Indians of Alaska are quick and eager to learn. They beg for teachers, and it is plainly the duty of the government to give them the advantages of industrial schools like those of which the Carlisle Training School is a shining example.

Committees have been appointed to circulate the petition in this town, and it is hoped that what ever help can be afforded a noble cause by the signature of our professional and business men will be promptly given

The following is the text of the petition:

To the House of Representatives of the United States.

Your petitioners, the citizens of Bloomsburg and vicinity, in the state of Pennsylvania, respectfully request that your honorable body will pass a bill providing a civil government for the territory of Alaska, with suitable provisions and regulations for the promotion of the educational and industrial interests of that territory.

The Humes Bill.

THE PEOPLE VS. THE TREASURY RING—THE PUBLIC MONEYS FOR PUBLIC USES—AND NOT FOR POLITICAL SPECULATORS AND REPUBLICAN RINGS.

The platform of the Pennsylvania Democratic State Convention for 1883, declares that PUBLIC MONEYS ARE FOR PUBLIC USES.

And further that: "The long continued abuses and spoliation of the State Treasury and defiance of law by its management make essential a radical reform so that large funds shall not be accumulated by the taxation of the people and distributed among favored depositories of the State officials, but that all surplus in excess of the immediate necessities of the State Government shall be invested in interest-bearing State or Federal securities until it may be applied to the extinguishment of the State debt."

The special significance and application of this declaration will be more fully understood upon a short review of the Humes law enacted by the Legislature at the regular session of 1883, and signed by Gov Pattison.

Prior to the passage of that law the speculation in state funds had been for many years the subject of noisome scandal in this commonwealth and the management of the treasury had been the objective point of the politicians who wanted to use its moneys for themselves and their friends by having them deposited in banks where they would do them most good. The entire financial system of the State was so manipulated as to accumulate enormous balances of from two to five million dollars in the State Treasury, which those who were in control would in turn loan out, without security, to the banks designated by the politicians, who would in turn obtain its use or interest for it from the institutions which they thus assisted to the people's money.

The Humes bill was as follows, and it was intended, as its provisions clearly show, to have all moneys that were lying idle in the favored banks invested in interest bearing securities, so that the State and not the banks and politicians would have the benefit of this enormous fund:

THE HUMES BILL.

"An Act to amend the provisions of the third section of an act approved February twelfth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six, entitled "An act supplementary to the act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several acts relating to the State Treasurer and commissioners of the sinking fund' approved May ninth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy four.' "

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same that section three of an act entitled 'An act supplementary to the several acts relating to the State Treasurer and commissioners of the sinking fund,' approved May ninth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four," which reads as follows:

"It shall be the duty of the State Treasurer to render a statement to the commissioners of the Sinking fund on the first business day of January, April, July and October in each and every year giving the balance remaining in the sinking fund in excess of the amount required to pay the interest of the public debt, whereupon the commissioners of the sinking fund shall authorize the purchase by the fiscal agent of the State of the loans of the commonwealth next maturing at the then market rates, provided such purchase can be made for the best interests of the commonwealth; provided further, that all such investments shall immediately be cancelled by said agent and certificate of the same forwarded to the commissioners of the sinking fund in like manner as if the said loan had been redeemed by the commonwealth," shall be amended to read as follows:

"That it shall be the duty of the State Treasurer to render a statement to the commissioners of the sinking fund on the first business day of January, April, July and October in each and every year, giving the balance remaining in the sinking fund in excess of the amount required to pay the interest on the public debt, whereupon the commissioners of the sinking fund shall authorize the purchase by the fiscal agent of the State of the loans of the commonwealth at the then market rates, provided that all such investments shall immediately be cancelled by said agent and a certificate of the same forwarded to the commissioners of the sinking fund in like manner as if the said loan had been redeemed by the commonwealth."

"Sec. 2. If in the opinion of the commissioners of the sinking fund the purchase of loans of the commonwealth cannot be made for the best interests of the commonwealth it shall be the duty of the said commissioners to authorize the purchase by the fiscal agent of the State of the bonds of the United States at the then market rates, the fiscal agent of the State shall make immediate return to said commissioners of the number and amount of each bond of the United States so purchased, and the premium paid therefor. And it shall be the duty of the State Treasurer to enter on the 'sinking fund ledger' the number, amount and premium paid for each United States bond so returned as purchased by the fiscal agent of the State, provided that the sinking fund commissioners shall have the right to dispose of bonds purchased under this act whenever the money shall be required for the extinguishment of the public debt, provided further, that the sinking fund commissioners shall have authority to sell the bonds of the United States so purchased whenever the loans of the commonwealth can be bought at such prices as they may deem for the best interests of the common wealth and State loans thus purchased shall be immediately cancelled, as provided by section one of this act.

The Same Old Song.

TO A TUNE THAT IS OUT OF HARMONY WITH FACTS AND FIGURES.

Whenever the republican politicians in the state are driven into a corner they hold up their hands and cry mercy, with the plea that their party has made a wonderful reduction of the state debt and repealed the tax on real estate. Now that they are in an ugly hole with the record of their candidates, Niles and Livsey, as opponents of the Humes act which directs the investment of the Sinking Fund in State or United States bonds, they sing again the same old song of the reduction of the state debt and the repeal of certain taxes. But this ancient republican lullaby will hardly soothe even babes and sucklings in the present campaign of facts and figures.

Let us examine this claim of a reduction of the state debt. During the twenty-two years of republican rule in this state the debt reduction has amounted to $18,114,064.22. In addition a war debt of $3,000,000 has been paid and the soldiers' orphans have been educated at an expense of $7,252,695.47. The sum of these payments is $28,366,759.69. The total amount of interest paid on the state debt from 1861 (when the republicans came into power) until 1882, both years inclusive, was $37,450,494 97. Add this sum to the total of the payments on the principal of the debt the war debt and the soldiers' orphan schools, as an aggregate of $65,817,254.44 and shown. All other payments at the treasury during that period of twenty-two years were for the ordinary current expenses of the state government.

But the receipts at the treasury, exclusive of loans, during that period were

	$134,325,014.54
Deduct above aggregate..................	65,817,254.44
Leaving for ordinary expenses,.........	$68,507,760.10

When the republicans took the government of the state out of the hands of the democrats in 1861 the total payments at the treasury for ordinary expenses amounted to but $1,036,828.64 per year. Hence if the republicans had not expended a greater sum per annum than the democrats in conducting the government of the state, in twenty-two years their total expenditures would have been just 22 times $1,036,828.64, or $22,810,230.08. But the official reports of the Auditor General show that the extraordinary sum of $68,507,760.10 was paid out at the treasury for orninary expenditures, or $45,697,536.02 more than the government would have cost at the democratic rate of expenditure in 1860.

The state debt is now $19,855,783 28. If the republican party had administered the state government as economically as the democrats did in 1860, the whole of the state debt would have been paid out of the taxes collected from the people in the last twenty years and $25,841,752.77 would have remained as a surplus.

These figures are taken from the official records and cannot be disputed They show precisely how the republicans have been reducing the state debt.—Patriot.

Is John McGinnis Playing Off?

From the Philadelphia Record.

The law making murder a capital crime in Pennsylvania should either be repealed or carried into effect with such due celerity and certainty as not to be robbed of its quality as a preventive of crime. After a murder is proven beyond doubt and sentence imposed the way to the gallows has so many bends and turns and dubious resting places that it seems almost as difficult to hang a convicted man as to convict a suspected one. John McGinnis, who has just received from the governor a ninety day reprieve in order to determine whether or not he is a crazy man, committed an unprovoked and brutal murder, September 30, 1881. He killed one woman and tried to kill another. On his trial his guilt was brought home to him beyond a shadow of doubt. In the past two years every device intended for the protection of innocence, but used to balk the course of justice, has been exhausted to keep the breath of life in this guilty wretch. His lastdodge, now that all the sinuosities of the law have failed to open for him a loophole of escape, is to feign insanity. That his insanity is feigned we are well advised; but sympathetic doctors and lawyers have so prevailed upon the executive authority that the criminal has secured a reprieve pending a medical examination. In the interest of justice there should be no more fooling in this affair or any other of the kind. As the board of pardons and the governor should be thoroughly informed in every such case, why should not the board of lunacy be called in to give an authoritative opinion before delay is secured? A murderer now takes his chances before a jury to determine his guilt; befo e the supreme court to determine the regularity of the trial; before the board of pardons and the governor to consider how the quality of mercy may be strained to his advantage, and McGinnis has caried his case one step farther. Let the board of lunacy look after him.

A Guilty Lover's Crime.

A WRONGED HUSBAND KNOCKED FROM A MOVING TRAIN WITH A COUPLING-PIN.

A dispatch from Catawissa dated September 29th, gives the following account of a crime:

William Brobst was brought to this place to-day to have an ugly wound in his head dressed. The wound was caused by Brobst being knocked off a train by Daniel Mensinger last night. Brobst is a young farmer and has an attractive wife and one child and lives six miles from Ringtown. A nice farm was left the couple by the wife's father and she, thinking this fact left her free to do as she pleased, fell in love with a young farmer named Daniel Mensinger and no efforts were made to conceal their intrigue from the husband or the neighbors. The husband was finally induced to have Mensinger arrested, but the case was settled by Mensinger taking an oath and giving bonds not to further disturb the happiness of the Brobst family.

But oaths or bonds could not cool the love of either Mensinger or the faithless wife, and last night Mensinger induced the forgiving husband to accompany him to Brandonville on a freight train. Brobst says that when the train had got fairly into a deep, narrow and dangerous cut a few miles north of Ringtown, Mensinger, without the least warning, struck Brobst on the head with a coupling-pin and knocked him off the cars. Brobst is a very active man and saved himself from getting under the train by clutching the weeds growing on the side of the cut and got off with the cut on his head and a few bruises. A warrant has been issued for Mensinger, but he has not yet been found.

TESTIFIES.

Popularity at home is not always the best test of merit, but we point proudly to the fact that no other medicine has won for itself such universal approbation in its own city, state, and country, and among all people, as

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

The following letter from one of our best-known Massachusetts Druggists should be of interest to every sufferer:—

RHEUMATISM. "Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism, so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."

OFFICE OF STRAWBRIDGE & CLOTHIER,
EIGHTH AND MARKET STS.

Philadelphia, September 25, 1883.

TO THE PUBLIC:
Especia'ly of the states of Pennsylvania,
New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware.

We have the pleasure to announce that our arrangements for the business of the present season, long considered and most carefully made, are now complete, and we respectfully invite the people from far and near to call on us, and inspect our enlarged facilities for doing business and the superb Stock we are prepared to exhibit in every department.

The increase in our business, which has been large and constant for years, has been greater than ever during the past twelve months, and we have, therefore, felt justified in making extraordinary and unprecedented preparations for the coming season, not only in the magnitude of the stock, but in the facilities for its distribution, as well as arrangements for the most prompt and careful service of our patrons in every way.

During the Summer we have added another building on Eighth Street to our store-rooms, and this alteration, just completed, while it adds considerably, though not largely to our space, enables us to make certain changes in the disposition of stocks, which economizes room and in other ways adds largely to the comfort and convenience of our patrons.

All our buildings have been renovated and freshened during the summer, and now, with the above alterations completed and our arrangements consummated, including the receipt of the most magnificent stock it has ever been our privilege to gather, we invite the public to call and inspect the buildings and examine the stock, which in the aggregate and detail will, we believe, compare favorably with any that has ever been placed on sale under one roof in America. This huge stock, approximating TWO MILLIONS OF DOLLARS in value in DRY GOODS ALONE, has been most carefully selected by a large corps of skilful buyers in the best markets of the world, and it is needless to add has been purchased EXCLUSIVELY FOR CASH. Every advantage that experience, skill and abundant capital can secure has, we believe, been secured for our patrons this season, and coupled with these advantages is a determination to serve them in such a way as to receive their constant and abiding patronage.

It is our aim, as it is the aim of all business men, to make money, and yet not so much to make money as to do business in the best way; to be successful in the highest sense; to render the most efficient service to the largest number; to adhere rigidly to and to lead in our own special business; to do the largest and the best and the most generously conducted retail dry goods business in the United States; to lay the foundation of that business broad and deep and sure. Here, in Philadelphia, the city of homes, with its million of population, surrounded by a country unsurpassed, if equalled anywhere for fertility and cultivation, and populated by other millions of thrifty and intelligent people, here we conceive is the place to build up such a business—a business that truly serves the people and with every increase in its size and facilities only more widely and efficiently renders that service to a greater number.

We believe no large and permanent success can be achieved on any other basis than that we have indicated, of rendering better service than can be had elsewhere; of deserving success by reason of rendering this service faithfully; of making it a cardinal principle to give at least as much as is received; to ensure and to be satisfied with nothing less than a mutuality of benefit between the house and its great constituency the country over. This is our aim and purpose. We ask the people to join with us in establishing such a business, and we ask for patronage on no other grounds.

Respectfully submitting our claims to a discerning public, we hereby extend a general invitation to call on us from this date, to view the buildings and inspect the business methods of 1883.

How Watch Cases are Made.

In buying a silver watch case great care should be taken to secure one that is solid silver throughout. The cap of most cheap silver cases is made of a composition known as albata, which is a very poor substitute for silver, as it turns black in a short time. The backs of such cases are made much thinner than those of an all silver case, being robbed in order to make the cap thicker and get in as much as possible of the cheap metal. Another important point in a silver case is the joints or hinges, which should be made of gold. Those of most cheap cases are made of silver, which is not a suitable metal for that purpose. In a brief period it warps, bends and spreads apart, allowing the backs to become loose upon the case and admitting the dust and dirt that accummulate in the pocket. The Keystone Silver Watch Cases are only made with silver caps and gold joints.

Notice to Subscribers Outside the County.

About two weeks ago statements were sent out to every subscriber outside of the county who owes anything on subscription. Up to to this time but very few have responded. As we have to pay postage on all such papers we must insist on a compliance with our terms which are strictly in advance. We cannot afford to pay the postage on the papers, send several bills and pay postage on them, and then run the risk of losing the subscription money besides. Our request is but fair, and as very few have complied with it, we are forced to give notice that all papers going outside of the county that are not paid for by October 15th will be stopped. We dislike to print duns in the paper, but when our private requests are ignored there is no other alternative.

Sixpenny, tenpenny, and such other terms, as applied to nails, have reference to weight and not to price. Nails are made a certain number of pounds to the thousand. A tenpenny nail is a thousand nails to ten pounds, a sixpenny nail is a thousand nails to six pounds, etc. The Englishman abbreviates pounds into "pun"—tenpun, and hence tenpenny.

TUNNELING FROM ONE MINE TO ANOTHER.—Coxe Bros. & Co. are about starting a great undertaking, the driving of a five-mile tunnel under ground. They expect by the success of this undertaking to gain command of two very extensive coal fields now regarded as lost.

One of the most careless things that a man can do, says an exchange, is to leave his horse untied. It matters not how gentle the horse may be, or what his record is for remaining where stopped, he is liable to be scared almost at any time on a thoroughfare, and a runaway is a frightful sight, even when it is unaccompanied by injury to man or beast. It does not cost anything to tie him, and it is always safe and prudent to do so.

While in Bloomsburg recently we put up at that justly popular hostelry, the Exchange Hotel, than which there is none better in the interior of the State. Mr. W. R. Tubbs, the genial and social proprietor, is a thorough landlord, his employees are courteous and obliging, while the cuisine is first-class in every respect. We are pleased to chronicle the fact that all Miltonians put up at that excellent hotel when visiting Bloomsburg, and all speak in the highest terms commendatory of the treatment received there.—Argus.

William McKelvy Hess, son of Mrs. J. H. Harman, died on Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock aged 25 years, 8 months and 1 day. For several years he has been suffering from consumption, but was confined to the house only a few weeks before his death. He was a young man of excellent business habits, and fine social qualities which made him friends wherever he went. Though Death is no respecter of persons, it seems peculiarly sad when one is cut down in the flower of his youth, with everything before him to make life desirable. The funeral will take place this (Friday) afternoon at the house at half past four o'clock.

The will contest of Esther Evans, which was argued some time last winter, and an issue granted, was settled by an agreement between the parties. The case was the first on the trial list for this term of court and would have consumed nearly a week had it been tried. The estate amounted to several thousand dollars, and under the will the heirs received nothing. But according to the agreement they will receive about the same amount as if they had gone to trial and received a verdict in their favor—conceding to the party trying to sustain the will the estimated costs and expenses of a jury trial.

Some of the papers have adopted the rule of charging for notices of festivals or announcements of any kind to which an admittance fee is charged. This ought to be the universal rule, but it is one very difficult to establish. People expect a newspaper to publish all notices and announcements of that character without charge, and yet we doubt very much whether the newspaper which publishes such announcements without charge is ever thanked or remembered for its generosity. It is in such matters as it is in politics, the newspaper is the burden bearer, but some one gets away with the material profits of the load it carries.—Independent

Prisoners Sentenced.

The following sentences were imposed Wednesday morning, October 3:

Charles Hamilton was first called before the court, when Judge Elwell said: You were convicted by the verdict of a jury of stealing poultry from Mrs. Webb, and you are convicted by your own confession of larceny in stealing the chickens of Mr. Rawlings—two separate indictments, going to show that you were engaged in the poultry business to an unreasonable extent, forgetful of your duty to society, marauding about the hen-roosts of other people; a very mean business as well as contrary to law.

The sentence we will impose upon you will be not so severe as we might impose, for you have run the risk by these larcenies of going to the penitentiary for a period of three years; Hereafter you had better pursue an honest course, and endeavor to get your living without stealing. The sentence of the court is that you, Charles Hamilton, pay a fine of ten dollars to the commonwealth and the costs of prosecution in the case of larceny of Mrs. Webb's property, and undergo imprisonment in the jail of Columbia county for the period of sixty days, and stand committed until this sentence is complied with; and in the case of the larceny of the property of William Rawlings the sentence of the court is that you pay a fine of ten dollars to the commonwealth, and the costs of prosecution, and undergo imprisonment in the jail of Columbia county for a period of sixty days commencing immediately after the termination of the sentence just pronounced, and that you stand committed until this Sentence is complied with.

Charles Cook was then called up.

JUDGE—Do you desire to say anything to the court in reference to the matter of your conviction before we proceed to sentence you?

Cook? No, sir.

JUDGE—You have the privilege if you think proper.

COOK—I don't wish to say anything.

The verdict of the jury convicted you of an offense of a heinous character. Your conduct was such that it is almost impossible to think that you were in your right mind. The idea of taking that little girl in the open daylight in the highway, tying her hands and tying her to the fence while her stockings were removed, and then undertaking to wade across the creek with her, without any other interference with her person, is unaccountable—it was certainly a very strange proceeding upon your part. The jury were compelled to come to the conclusion that your intention was to have an intercourse with that little girl something more than ten years of age. You did nothing else to show that was your motive; but you committed a gross assault and battery upon her by tying her hands and but for the fact that there were boys about there, it is uncertain what would have been the result. We understand that you are a man of family having a wife and one child for whom we feel great sympathy. Your conduct was of a character that might send you to the penitentiary for a period of five years. It was shown upon the trial that you had hitherto maintained a good character, that your behavior had been unexceptionable. We hope that the punishment that we will inflict upon you will induce you hereafter to conduct yourself in every respect as a good citizen. We have concluded to pronounce u on you a sentence, which is really, under the circumstances a merciful one. The sentence of the court is that you, Charles Cook, pay a fine of ten dollars to the commonwealth and the costs of prosecution, that you undergo imprisonment by separate or solitary confinement at labor in the eastern penitentiary for the term of one year and nine months, and that you stand committed until this sentence is complied with.

James D. Terwilliger and Charles McDowell, come before the court.

Do you desire to say anything to the court in reference to this case.

TERWILLIGER—No, sir.

MCDOWELL—No, sir.

The jury were compelled to come to the conclusion that you young men laid the plan of robbing Levi Michael of his money. The circumstances pointed so clearly to your guilt that, although they would gladly have acquitted you of that charge, they were forced to the conclusion that you saw this man intoxicated at Lightstreet, thought his money could easily be got from him and being somewhat drunk already and readily to be made more so, provided yourselves with the means of doing that, and followed him to Espy and across the river. It is not probable that you had any idea of being compelled to use force in order to get his money; but, finding some resistance on his part one of you did inflict upon him violence which might have terminated fatally and you might have been placed upon trial for a much more heinous offense even than highway robbery. He was left senseless upon his wagon; if his horse had gone on with his lumbre, Mr. Michael might have been thrown off and been killed. You left him insensible upon his wagon, and took from him that which was of value to him, some one hundred and forty dollars.

You have sustained, both of you, according to the evidence, good characters heretofore; but in an evil moment you allowed yourselves to be tempted by what you believed to be an opportunity to get money wrongfully; instigated by an evil spirit, you allowed yourselves to be led away to commit this wicked deed. You are still young men. It is a painful task for the court to impose the sentence of the law. It is not our sentence; it is what the law requires, what the wisdom of those who legislate for us has provided. You may yet retrieve your character; it is not necessary that you should consider that your manhood is entirely lost because you are committed to prison; but if hereafter you shall as heretofore, behave yourselves as good citizens, I have no doubt that upon all hands you would be welcomed back into society and all be glad of your reformation. Your own thoughts suggest to you all that it would be proper for us to say in reference to this matter. We doubt not you feel penitent, regret the act more perhaps beacuse of its wickedness than because of the punishment that it brings down upon you.

The sentence of the court is that you James D. Terwilliger and Charles McDowell each pay a fine of five hundred dollars to the commonwealth, and the costs of prosecution, that you undergo imprisonment by separate or solitary confinement at labor in the eastern penitentiary for the term of two years and six months, and that you stand committed till this sentence is complied with.

And now October 3, 1880, ordered that the sheriff conduct James D. Terwilliger, Charles McDowell and Charles Cook to the penitentiary within ten days and be allowed two assistants.

The prisoners were in apparently good spirits, and as the sheriff handcuffed them together in pairs and took them back to the jail, they were joking among themselves.

Com. vs. Polish Jake, selling liquor without a license.

This case came from Centralia "Polish Jake" is the man who a short time since opened a saloon, and did business on the credit system. Being unable to read or write he permitted his customers to do their own charging on his books. When he tried to collect some of his outstanding accounts an examination of his books showed that there were large amounts entered against Henry ward Beecher, Geo. Washington, Queen Victoria, and many of the leading citizens of Centralia. These charges of course, were false, and this system of doing business nearly broke Jake up. The jury found him guilty of selling liquor without license, and the court sentenced him to pay a fine of $200 and costs of prosecution.

Among the Records of the court of quarter Sessions of the Peace, in and for said county it is inter alia, thus contained.

The Grand Inquest of Pennsylvania inquiring for the body of Columbia county respectfully report that we have discharged our duties in the matter of the presentmet of bills of indictment that have been laid before us. That we have examined the public buildings and make the following recommendations: That a competent engineer be employed at once to examine into the matter of drainage for said jail, and report thereon, and that the proper drain be made as soon as possible, at the county's expense. We believe that without proper drainage the jail cannot be properly renovated. That a competent person be employed to repair the roof of said jail, as we find it in bad condition. That the Town of Bloomsburg be requested to grade and lay the sidewalk and crossings on Iron street between 6th and 7th streets leading to said jail. That a new stove be placed in the Recorder's office. That doors be placed on the cases in the vaults for the better protection of the records. Other than the above we find the public buildings in good condition.

Respectfully Submitted,

Commonwealth vs. Terwilliger and McDowell. The trial of this case began on Wednesday and closed on Friday, the jury finding the defendants guilty. E. H. & R. R. Little appeared for the Commonwealth, and Col. Knorr and E. R. Ikeler for the defendants. A strong chain of circumstantial evidence surrounded the accused. Michael, the man who was robbed, identified them as the men he met on the hill opposite Espy. They offered him whiskey from a bottle. The defendants were proven to have bought a bottle of whiskey at Lightstreet that night though the testimony differed as to the kind and size of the bottle. They were in Espy that evening, and borrowed a boat for the purpose, as they said, of robbing an outline. There was some conflicting evidence as to whether Michael or the defendants crossed the river first, but the testimony taken altogether, pointed with sufficient certainty to the accused, to lead the jury to a verdict of of guilty.

The Fair.

The annual exhibition of the Columbia county Agricultural Society begins next Wednesday and continues four days. It is expected to be one of the most successful ever held. Persons who have articles of any kind possessing merit should put them on exhibition. It costs nothing to make entries as the exhibitor pays a dollar for entering and receives a dollar's worth of tickets. Let everybody help to make the fair a grand success.

Famous for Sleeping Four Months.

John Gyumber, the Hungarian who several years ago achieved almost a national reputation as a long-time sleeper, was married, recently, at Allentown. The bride is a woman about twenty-five years of age, and for several months she was cook in the Hungarian boarding house. The wedding created quite a stir among the friends of the couple, and after the words were spoken which made them husband and wife, the entire party repaired to the Hungarian quarter, where amid feasting and drinking the event was celebrated. Six barrels of beer were furnished for the wedding. Gyumber will set up a boarding house with his bride as chief cook.

Mifflin Items.

The latest we can report is a ladies' corn cutting party for the afternoon and a dance at night.

Sam. Lehmon of Espy called at west Mifflin on Sunday.

Geo. and Sadie Welsh of Watsontown made a short visit at this place and Nescopeck a few days since.

M. C. Andreas and S. M. Hetler while driving on the streets on Saturday evening came in collision and one of the latter's ponies was badly hurt.

Some of our young people are attending the school in the Baptist church basement at Berwick.

A musical sociable at M. B. Hetler's on Saturday evening is among the liveliest events. Mrs. Holman of Hazleton and Miss Harter of Berwick were among those present.

Mrs. Ed, Green of Pittsburg is staying a short time with relations at this place.

Lloyd and Jennie Creasy of Williamsburg Virginia are making a visit at this place and Berwick. They will accompany their mother home.

And now that the Record has (as he thinks) guessed who the Mifflin correspondent to the Columbian is, now "peg" it to him. Wonder who wrote that piece for him. Not so bad. He forgot to tell what his tax for building is. Wonder whether he has'nt another fellow to call an idiot. Good morning!

The new depot is finished and adds very much to the appearance of the place.

A Jump into Eternity.

Charles Price, a helper in the nail works at Sunbury and another young man named Shrunk, visited the Snyder county side of the river, using a small boat for the purpose. It is stated they both imbibed pretty freely, and started for home about half-past six o'clock. The half of the return trip was made in safety, when at the place where the water is known to be very deep, it being a point opposite the second pier of the new Reading railroad bridge near this side of the river, Price got up from his seat in the boat. Shrunk says he advised him to sit down, when he remarked, as he straightened himself, "Good-bye, Bill." Then getting into a stooping position, he sprang from the boat into the river and sank beneath the waves. Shrunk called loudly for help and was towed into shore. Instant assistance was given him, but the drowning man could not be seen, his body failing to come up. Price, the drowned man is said to be from Reading, and his relatives also reside there. His body was recovered next day.

ANOTHER CASE OF KIDNEY DISEASE CURED BY RHEUMATIC SYRUP.

Furnace Village, Wayne Co., N. Y.,
March 3, 1882.

Gents—Fifteen years ago I had a very severe attack of rheumatism, which settled in my back and hips, and much of the time for the last five years I have been unable to attend to my business; for weeks and weeks at a time I have been unable to turn in my bed or to feed myself. I have tried many remedies, and two years ago I consulted one of the most celebrated physicians in the State, who pronounced it kidney disease, but I grew worse all the time during his treatment. I heard your Rheumatic Syrup highly recommended, and I tried it, and before I had used two bottles all pain had left me, and to-day I can get about and am able to attend to my business, and am improving rapidly every day. I am confident that the Rheumatic Syrup, if taken as directed, will cure any case of rheumatism or kidney disease. I am most respectfully yours,

Mr. John H. At that time I was completely disabled with gout in both feet and rheumatism in both knees, and helpless. Now I comfortably hobble about the house, and expect to be out in a week. It may be a coincidence, my amendment and the use of your medicine. I hope for no occasion to try it again, but if need be I will try it again in a fresh attack with great confidence.

RATHER TOO LONG.

After Twenty Years on the Wrong Side of Life a Virginian Turns the Tables.

"How long did you say?"

"Twenty years I said. Up to the time I mentioned I had suffered from diseased liver for twenty years," said Mr. S. T. Hancock, of Richmond, Va., half sadly, as though thinking of that dilapidated section of his life. "At times I almost wished it had pleased Providence to omit the liver from the human anatomy."

"Bad enough—twenty years of that sort of thing," responded a listener. "What was the upshot of it?"

"The upshot was that some time ago I went down to Scott's drug store in the city, and bought one of BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS, applied it and was relieved in a few hours, and am now as sound as though my liver were made of India-rubber."

Benson's—unlike the old fashioned kind of plasters—act promptly. Look for the word CAPCINE, which is cut in the genuine. Price 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

The Father of Fish-Culture.

SETH GREEN'S IDEAS ABOUT THE FINNY TRIBE AND SOME OF HIS VARIED EXPERIENCES.

(Turf, Field and Farm.)

"How did you ever come to devise this scheme?"

"I have been working at it ever since I was large enough to bend a pin."

The above remark was addressed to Mr. Seth Green, the veteran fish culturist, who is known to the entire world, and his reply indicates the extent of his labors.

"When I was young," he continued, "I would lie on the limbs of trees that reached over the water entire afternoons watching the movements of the fish and studying their habits. In this way I discovered many characteristics which were before unknown. I saw, as every observer must see, the destructive elements that are warring against fish, and I realized that unless something were done, the life in the streams of this country would become extinct. To counteract this disastrous end became my life work, and I am happy to say I have seen its accomplishment."

"Were you successful on the start?"

"No, indeed. Up to that time all artificial attempts to hatch and raise fish from the spawn had failed, and I was compelled to experiment in an entirely new manner. The work was a careful one, but I finally succeeded, and to-day I am able to hatch and raise fully seventy-five per cent of all spawn."

"Enormous! Why, that is a larger percentage than either the vegetable or animal kingdoms produce in a natural condition."

"I know it, but we exercise the greatest care in the start, and guard the little fellows until they become able to care for themselves."

The foregoing conversation occurred at Caledonia where the representative of this paper was paying a visit to the state fish hatcheries. It has been his privilege to report very many interesting sights within the past twenty-five years, but the view presented here exceeds in interest anything ever before attempted.

"How many fish are there in those ponds, Mr. Green?"

"As we have never attempted to count them it will be impossible to say. They extend way up into the millions though. We shipped over three millions out of the ponds this year and there seemed to be as many afterward as before. We have nearly every variety of the trout family and many hybirds."

"You speak of hybirds. Mr. Green. What do you mean by that?"

"I have experimented for years in crossing the breed of the various fish and am still working upon it. We cross the female salmon trout with the male brook trout, and thus produce a hybird. Then we cross the hybird with the brook trout, which gives us three-quarter brook trout and one-quarters salmon trout. This makes one of the finest fishes in the world. He has all the habits of the brook trout, lives in both streams and lakes, develops vermillion spots on his sides, rises readily to a fly, is far more vigorous and fully one-third larger than ordinary brook trout of the same age. The possibilities of development in the fish world are great and we are rapidly ascertaining what they are."

As the man of news watched the countenance of Mr. Green while he was giving the above account, he could not but feel that he was in the presence of one of the few investigators who, from a rich and life-long experience, bring great benefit to the world. Let the reader imagine a strong and stalwart frame, surmounted by a head strongly resembling that of Socrates, and covered with a white silky beard and luxuriant gray hair. Seth Green, the father of fish culture, is a picture of health, and the reporter could not help remarking so.

"If you had seen me the last winter and spring, young man, you might have thought differently," said the veteran.

"How is that? One would think, to look at you, that sickness was something of which you knew nothing."

"And so it was until last winter. I went down into Florida in the fall to see what kind of fish they had in that state and study their habits and was attacked with malaria in its severest form, and when I came home I realized for the first time in my life, that I was sick. My symptoms were terrible. I had dull, aching pains in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone, and I felt a lack of energy such as I had often heard described but had never experienced. Any one who has ever had a severe attack of malaria can appreciate my condition. I went to bed and remained there all the spring, and if there ever was a sick man I was one."

"It seems hardly possible. How did you come to recover so completely?"

"My brother who had been afflicted by a severe kidney trouble and threatened with Bright's disease was completely cured by a remedy in which I had great confidence. I therefore tried the same remedy for my malaria and am happy to say I am a well man to-day and through the instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure, which I believe to be one of the most valuable of medicines. Indeed, I see it is endorsed by the United States medical college of New York, and that Dr. Gunn, dean of that institution, has written a long article concerning its value."

"And are you not as well as formerly?"

"Apparently so. I keep the remedy on hand all the while though and do not hesitate to recommend it to others."

"One question more. How many ponds of fish have you here and how are they divided?"

"Well, we have 43 ponds which are divided up as follows: 22 ponds of brook trout, 2 ponds of salmon trout, 4 of McCloud river or rainbow trout, 2 ponds of German trout, 3 of California mountain trout, 2 ponds of hybirds 4 of one-quarter salmon and three-quarters brook trout, 2 ponds of gold fish, and 1 pond of Carp. Then we have what we call the centennial pond of 'happy family,' consisting of crosses of different fish, including Kennebec salmon, Land Locked salmon, California salmon, brook trout, salmon trout and hybirds. These fish range in size from minnows to 18-pounders, and in age from one-and one-half months to eleven years. I forgot to say, also, that we have a 'hospital' pond which is entirely empty, which speaks pretty well for a community of many millions. Indeed the whole secret of fish culture can be summed up in four things. Impregnation,—using no water. Plenty of food. Plenty of pure water and cleanliness."

The numerous fish exhibitions which are taking place in all parts of Europe and the unusual interest which is being manifested in this subject throughout the world all owe their origin to the process above described as originated and conducted by Seth Green. It is certainly cause for congratulation to every American that this country produces so many men whose genius brings value to the world, and it is proof positive of the greatest merit that a remedy even with such high standing as Warner's Safe Cure is known to have should be so strongly endorsed and recommended by one so reputable and reliable as Seth Green.

Common Weeds.

Many years ago we had not as many doctors as we have now. The roads were bad, and people lived at great distances. It was then that herbs or "simples," as they used to call them, were in great demand, and the good housewives and mothers learned to be very skillful, in cases of sickness, in the art of making healing drinks and ointments, which were of great efficacy. And what do you think they were made of? Why, only the simple wild flowers or roots that grew all around their very doors. But except in remote country places, where they seldom drop old customs, these simple medicines have gone quite out of fashion, and now-a-days people when they are ill send for a physician, take just what he gives them and pay him a tremendous fee, when at the same time they do not dream that they are often receiving from him as simple a remedy as their great grandmothers took, years and years ago, for the very same disease—only the name has been changed in these later days. For instance, if you go into a drug store and look among the long row of labelled bottles you will find one marked Taraxacum. Now this is a hard Latin name, and perhaps you have no idea what it means. You will find it to be a very old friend of yours, perhaps the very commonest in the lane where you walk every day.—the dandelion! Another fanciful label is Tussilago ferfara, which is nothing more nor less than coltsfoot,—so called from the form and size of the leaves, which are round and as large as the palm of the hand—a marguerite of a brilliant yellow, the rays as fine and slender as hairs. From the time of Hippocrates this flower has been supposed to have a salutary influence on the lungs, and has long been employed to soothe irritation of the air passages in cases of asthma. The cotton of the leaves, wrapped in a rag in a solution of saltpetre and dried in the sun, made an excellent tinder in past times, when we had no lucifer matches.

Liquorice is another of the plants which is Glycyrrhiza glabra, a very hard name that botanists have given to this simple plant—but botanists are fond of hard names!

The Digitalis that exercises such a dangerous influence over man, impeding the circulation of the blood, and which no animal ever touches, is the foxglove with its stem of rose-colored flowers, tiger spotted, and white within, abundantly skirting the woods in whose shade and coolness it delights.

Who would have thought that Nabulus Albus was only the common white lettuce, or that Hydrastis Canadensis was the little lilac-colored flower of the colchicum which enamels the meadows in the autumn, coming without leaves or supports?

Many plants such as hoarhound, angelica and others, do not seem to be recognized as plants at all. They are sweet stuff! Hoarhound, with its many stalks a cubit high, covered over with a thin white down, is cultivated for the sake of the extract, and made into candies and other forms. While the peppermint, with its pretty purple flowers, is sold to the druggists, and distilled for oil. We are all apt to look upon the nettle, the very disagreeable, stinging plant, as good for nothing, but to be rooted up whenever it is found; but if this poor despised plant can cause pain by its sting, it can also relieve pain, for if you were to make a drink, by boiling its roots in water, it would entirely remove the irritation of the skin, caused by that painful complaint, the "nettle rash," while the fresh juice will take away the marks of a bruise; and if we were to go on and tell how many insects make their meal off the nettle, and live on it as a home, or of the beautiful lace that has been made from its fibers, you would not regard it as entirely useless—but now we are only speaking of the medical properties of the plant.

You have taken a severe cold, and as you go home along the lane, does it ever occur to you that several remedies are growing close beside you? Take the white hoar-hound, which, from its usefulness, has in many small places, found its way from the lane to the herb bed; or, if you like another remedy, there is the little cup moss, growing so freely all about you; or still another, the mallow. All country children have played with the seeds of the mallow, and called them "cheeses." There are several kinds, but the marsh mallow is the one mostly used. Then there is the pretty plant so valuable for inflammation of the skin, called "Poor Robin," or "Herb-robert," which is nothing more than the wild geranium. We all know it, for it grows everywhere, under a bush, high up on a wall, in the lane, or hidden away in the woods! The small flowers are pink, and the leaves, which have a very strong smell, turn red in the autumn, and are of great benefit in cases of inflammation.

In this short article we have seen how useful some of our commonest plants are, and that everything has its appointed place in the world. Who can doubt the existence of a superintending and all designing Creator, who has disposed every part in relation to the great whole, making even the little leaf of the most insignificant herb of the field an essential member of the grand scheme of the universe! speaking to all who have ears to hear, the lessons of love and wisdom? These "characters of Nature" which everywhere meet the eye, are not a common, but a sacred writing, for they are the very hieroglyphics of God."

COOKING POTATOES.—A favorite way to cook potatoes now is to boil them in their jackets until they are tender, and then dry them off in a hot oven. Sweet potatoes are excellent also cooked in this way. Of course care must be taken to remove the potatoes from the boiling water as soon as they and tender. There is no vegetable that gains more by being prepared with due attention than the potato, and the difference between a soggy, water-soaked potato and one that is properly cooked is greater than many women seem to know.

Four miners were killed at Wilkes Barre on last Saturday by falling seventy feet down a shaft. Three were married men who leave families.

Wm. M. Singerly editor of the Philadelphia Record purposes building one thousand dwelling houses in Philadelphia within the next few years. He has already completed one hundred and twenty six.

Personal to Mr. Wanamaker and Personal to—you, if you are one of the thousands passing through Philadelphia, homeward, from sea or woods, mountain or springs, stop over a train, or break your journey for a day and see the store. Come in and leave your luggage at the checking places near almost every principal entrance; look about, rest, and when ready take up your journey with a full knowledge of where the store is, what is in it, how it does things. This will gratify us and you, and may serve us both. Perhaps you saw the store during the Centennial year. To have seen it then was one thing; indeed, to have seen it any year since, is quite a different thing, but to see it now is quite a different thing still. In the Centennial year it was simply an overgrown clothing store, full of men's and boys' garments, and the workmen who cut and made the goods. Now the clothing is delegated to its old quarters in the big clothing houses of Oak Hall, at Sixth and Market, and the establishment adjoining the Continental Hotel on Chestnut Street, and now only a small section remains of what was seen at the Centennial time.

Then there was a single floor, now it is skirted with galleries on all sides; and since they have gone up to the third story, elevators have had to be put in to carry the people up. Then there was no opening through to Chestnut Street, and now ten stores have been taken in the Chestnut Street end so that the block from Chestnut Street to Market, and from Thirteenth to Juniper, or East Broad, is practically one property. The basement is worth mentioning, too. While the business was going along on the main floor we kept up the floors by stout columns, and for nearly a year dug away the earth that hundreds of carts were removing, to make, from curb-line under the street pavement all around three sides of our house, the most perfect and commodious lower floor that we ever saw. It is light as day by electric lights which do not heat the air. It is dry, and cooled by ventilating machinery. It has eight broad staircases, so that within a few steps of any portion there is quick exit. This is one of the pleasantest parts of the store. The Gentleman's Wash Rooms and Reading Rooms are here. The new and spacious Toilet Rooms for Ladies are here, and the new section for refreshments is just being completed here. All this makes up a Department of Public Comfort quite acceptable to those who want the conveniences to rest awhile.

It would be natural for us to speak of the growth of the store, but to do so lays us open to apparent boasting; this is not our purpose; we grow as Topsy growed—"Cause she couldn't help it." People want the service we render, we try to make service better and better, and make them want us more and more. This is a place where many of the things are gathered that are wanted in every family in the city and country round about. They are got from the best makers, presented for sale fairly, sold without haggling, sold to be returned if the price of the goods are wrong. Why shouldn't such a place grow?

Men work from sunrise to sunset, aye, spend their lives in getting money so that their families can get things. Isn't it wise to find out the best place to get the things? "It is the best place," that we have been building at, and we are building at it every day still, and we hope never to be done while there is anything to improve.

You must surely come to see us on this invitation, and then you will know what to say to your friends.

A LADY of Utica, N. Y.

Put a Brand on Him.

"Women are a necessary evil," he said, bringing down his fist hard on the counter to emphasize the heartless remark. It was in the village store at West Milton, Saratoga County, and the speaker was the central figure of a group of bucholic philosophers. He was homely, slovenly and sixty."

"There's where I differ from you altogether," said Mr. George T. Graham, of the same place. "Women are mostly what men make 'em. When husbands are brutes wives will fall into submission or make home hot for the men; and they're unnatural in either character. Love them, and especially be good to them when they're sick, and you'll have no trouble. There's my wife, now. She's suffered a good deal with dyspepsia, nervous prostration and other ailments that took the bloom off her cheeks and the spring out of her steps. Well, she saw an advertisement of PARKER'S TONIC, and thought it would be just the thing for her case. Gentlemen, I sent five miles after a bottle. She took it. I sent again after more. So several times. Trouble? why, if you could see how much good it has done her you would say that women are the greatest of God's blessings, and PARKER'S TONIC is the next."

This preparation, which has been known as PARKER'S GINGER TONIC, will hereafter be called simply PARKER'S TONIC. This change has been rendered necessary by substitutes imposed upon their customers by unprincipled dealers under the name of ginger; and as ginger is really an unimportant flavoring ingredient, we drop the misleading word.

There is no change, however, in the preparation itself, and all bottles remaining in the hands of dealers, wrapped under the name of PARKER'S GINGER TONIC contain the genuine medicine if the facsimile signature of Hiscox & Co., is at the bottom under outside wrapper.
